WASHINGTON, D. C., OCT. 24, 1883

IN ADVANCE OF THE MESSAGE An esteemed contemporary assure us that the President is not only of posed to the reciprocity treaty with Mexico, but to all reciprocity treatles and that while he is in favor of ad mitting raw materials to this country free of duty, he is in principle some what of a protectionist. "The rea way to deal with the tariff," he thinks "Is by direct laws, as we have now, and that treaties are evasions, which should not be resorted to in this age of modern legislation.

This promulgation of Mr. Cleveland's sentiments so long in advance of his first annual message to Congress and in the absence of any previous pronounce ment to the same effect, is indeed in portant, if true.

The information, however, purportto have come from an "intimate friend" of the President's, to whom he snoke unreservedly on the subject, and who afterwards proceeded in the most cold blooded way imaginable to give away what the President said. We are therefore inclined to consider the truthfulness of the statement as far less obvious than its importance, and tinged with too large an infusion of romance to be accepted as authorita-

It is not at all probable that Mr. Cleveland would communicate his views on the tariff to any one in whom he had not the most implicit confidence and it is highly improbable that he has any confidential friends about him through whom executive secrets are in the habit of leaking. At the proper time and in the usua way the President will make known his sentiments on the several leading questions that are likely to occupy pub He attention this winter, and not be fore nor in any unusual way.

So far as the tariff is concerned he is doubtless in full accord with the general position of the party which elected him rather than that of the party which did its best to compass his defeat. Neither is it likely that he looks upon treaties of reciprocity as "evasions." They are only so criticized by the ad vocates of a high tariff, who would permit of no legislation enabling the country to climb over or work under the Chinese wall with which they have succeeded in fencing in its commerce

THE dramatic season in Montana is opening with wild Western exuberance. In Butte, Montana, the palaces of amusement are being liberally patronized, and an opportunity is given all to attend. Not only do they have performances every night of the week with pro rata matinees, but even go giving both Sunday evening entertain ments and Sunday matinees. The attractions for to-morrow afternoon are varied at one place. The great Jennings and O'Brien will appear in "their wonderful glove contest," and there will be a "spicy after-piece" entitled the "School for Scandal." At another Thesplan temple one can have five hours of "elegant pleasure," concluding with "a highly sensational after-piece, 'The Bridal Chamber,'" which we are informed is "full of delicious fun." Still another theatre in the same lively metropolis, where there are "twentytwo elegant private boxes," offers among other things to-morrow "The Dumb Boy of Manchester," "Casey, the Fiddler," and "Two men from Walkersville."

JUDGE FORAKER, if he is reported correctly, does not shine so very effulgently in New York. At the big Republican meeting in that city last night he said in vindication of the bloody shirt course pursued in Ohio, that the south has had all the war it wants and has not pluck enough to fight it over again. If that assertion did not show how exalted is Judge Foraker's states manship he certainly came out grandly when shortly afterwards he attacked President Cleveland's administration and made the principal point of his arraignment the awful fact that under Democratic rule the pleture of the Goddess of Liberty has given way to the head of Thomas Jefferson on the postal cards. We fear that the sight from Mr. Foraker's two eyes converges about a quarter of an iach in front of

We fear that John will have to be taught of yesterday, portraying the present estimable Chief Clerk of the War Department, Mr. John Tweedale, it is stated that Mr. Crosby died on July 1, 1882. I suppose the reporter meant my official, not my natural, death, because I have been quite actively engaged in the law practice since that date, and to look me over one would suppose, now, that I am a very lively course.

Washington, October 24. some more lessons. In San Francisc yesterday sixty Chinese cigar-makers quit work because the firm by which they were employed refused to discharge their white workmen. They struck by order of the Chinese Union, which seems to have decreed that the "white men must go."
